

Slam poetry homophobia

You think gay people are divergent,
But I think we are all the same, we are not different

You think insulting, obliterating doesn't hurt
But I think and I know the pain remains engrave in the heart

You think they are defenceless
But I think you are just worthless

Why do you hate them?
What did they do?

Some people struggle to help the LGBT community, to accept who they are

You think calling they by a rude name is great
But I think they are just hurt
I think they are _____ deep inside

You think these people can bear your bullying
But if you keep on, they will break down

You think belittling someone is going to change their choice
But I think what you think is just unbearable

Why does homophobia exist? Does it really make sense?

Pauline et Ines